

VIA – by Izzy Burton

My life a million pieces, a puzzle incomplete.

So many roads I've taken with trusting hopeful feet. Dreams have died, yet others bloomed.

No sense in looking back. At times the light shone brightly along my chosen track. But even when the skies turn dark, I've soldiered on, uncertain.

My way ahead was out of sight, shielded by a curtain.

I put my trust in something else. For what else could I do?

And in the end, I found my way. Fate had pulled me through and all the people I have loved, I held them in my heart. They touched my soul in many ways, even when apart.

Every day has been a chance to start my life anew. To learn to see the magic. To feed the seeds that grew. And as the days turn into years I see how far I've come.

I look between the trees and clouds and there, I see the sun.

“My barn having burnt down, I could now see the moon.”

- Basho

What Is Your Life Wisdom?

1. _____

2. _____

3. _____