

The Wind And The Sun

One day, the boastful wind declared to the sun, 'You know that I am the strongest and most effective of all the weather!'

And the sun replied, 'All weather can be strong and effective.' But the stubborn wind disagreed. 'All weather is strong,' said the wind, 'but I am the strongest of all. Let us have a competition to prove this. The weather that makes people remove the most of their clothing will show that they are indeed the strongest of all.'

The sun agreed to take part in the competition and suggested that the wind should go first. And so the wind blew and blew upon the earth, creating first a light breeze, and then massive gales that swept across the lands below. Peoples' hats flew up into the air and many were forced to hold tightly to their jackets and coats so that they would not lose them in the mighty gale.

After many minutes of blowing and blowing, the wind had managed to cause a great deal of chaos.

He had blown away many hats. He had swept away empty bottles, rubbish, newspapers and umbrellas. But he had not caused people to lose their clothes.

Next it was the turn of the sun. And the sun shone brightly in the clear blue sky, heating up the earth below until the people began to take off their clothes. First they removed their shoes, then socks and shirts, then jackets. Some even removed their trousers in an attempt to stay cool in the lovely afternoon heat.

When the wind saw how effective the sun had been, he grew very angry indeed and caused the weather to change from sunshine back to wind so that the people below had to quickly put their clothes back on and head indoors away from the unexpected gale. Wind could not believe that the sun had won the competition and proven himself to be the most effective of all weather.

The rain and clouds, and the rest of the weather, all cheered for the sun and hailed him as the new hero. But the sun immediately stopped the cheering and told everyone that he was not a hero at all, but that all weather was important in its own unique way. 'There cannot be one of us without the other,' explained the sun. 'Each of us does an important job, and each of us depends on the other to create the seasons. We water the earth, we blow the clouds across the sky, give people light and shade, and make sure that trees and flowers and crops grow in the earth.'

The sun called the wind over to share in the glory; he explained that all weather was part of a team and that they should all be proud of the work that they do. Wind understood then that everything and everybody is different. It is important not to feel that you are better than anybody else. Wind also understood how important it was to work as a team so that you might make the most of the strengths of those around you. And so it was that all weather worked in harmony, each doing the task best suited to them, each appreciating the work of the other.

The Wind and the Sun

The Wind and the Sun were arguing about which was the stronger.

Suddenly they saw a traveller coming down the road.

The Sun said: "I see a way to decide our argument. Whichever of us can cause that traveller to take off his coat shall be the stronger. You begin."

So the Sun retired behind a cloud, and the Wind began to blow as hard as it could upon the traveller.

But the harder he blew the more closely did the traveller wrap his cloak round him, till at last the Wind had to give up in despair.

Then the Sun came out and shone in all his glory upon the traveller, who soon found it too hot to walk with his cloak on.

Moral: Kindness works better than unkindness.

The Wind and the Sun

Order the parts of the story.

Then the Sun came out and shone in all his glory upon the traveller, who soon found it too hot to walk with his coat on.

So the Sun retired behind a cloud, and the Wind began to blow as hard as it could upon the traveller.

The Sun said: "I see a way to decide our argument. Whichever of us can cause that traveller to take off his coat shall be the stronger. You begin."

Suddenly they saw a traveller coming down the road.

The Wind and the Sun were arguing about which was the stronger.

But the harder he blew the more closely did the traveller wrap his coat round him, till at last the Wind had to give up in despair.

Kindness works better than unkindness.

Name _____

Storyboard

Title: The North Wind and the Sun

4.

5.

6.

Gentle persuasion is more effective than force.

1.

2.

3.

StoryboardTitle: The North Wind and the Sun

1. The North Wind and the Sun argue about who is stronger.

2. They see a traveller wearing a cloak, walking down a road.

3. They agree to have a contest. Who can make the traveller take off his cloak first?

4. The North wind blows as hard as he can, but the traveller does not take off his cloak.

5. The sun shines down warmly on the traveller. The traveller takes off his coat.

6. The Sun wins the contest: "Gentle persuasion is more effective than force."

Gentle persuasion is more effective than force.

THE CONTEST BETWEEN THE SUN AND THE WIND

Name _____ Date _____

Sun Graphic Organizer

Directions: Summarize the main idea of the story by writing a sentence on each ray of the sun to tell who, what, why, and how. Write other important details about the story on the extra lines provided.

THE WIND AND THE SUN

Wind and Sun wanted to see who could be first to remove a man's coat. Wind blew hard, trying to force the coat off. The cold man pulled it tighter.

Sun smiled brightly and warmed the air. The hot man took off his coat. "You see," said the Sun, "there is greater strength in gentleness."

THE WIND AND THE SUN

Please visit us!

The largest and most complete lesson library on the web.

Everything in English language teaching

SUBSCRIBE A red rectangular button with the word 'SUBSCRIBE' in white capital letters. To the right of the text is a white bell icon with a black outline.

Follow
-US-

Follow Us On

Teachers Pay Teachers