

MISSING U

by Brooke Wagstaff

This is the tale of the letter named "I"
A lonely author who lived life with a sigh.

Typing her treatise on a common green P
I encountered a problem while printing one key.

The harder she pushed, the worst was still true
I declared to herself, "I'm missing my U!"

A panic seized I and she looked at the sky
Confirming her fear that all was arye.

I dashed through the city and away from the crowds
Fleeing the streets and all that was loud.

Climbing a cliff, overlooking the sea
I searched for a sign that would answer her plea.

My writing is hindered. My home life is stark.
Upon a journey for U, I must now embark.

She hopped on a ship and did sail double quick
Clutching her side, I felt quite seasick.

She arrived at a jungle all filled with suspense
A lump in her throat said she'd moved well past tense.

The bees they were buzzing, the bluejays flew near
But I gathered her courage and slashed past her ... fear.

She burst through to a vista, all cloaked in blue
And I's eyes slowly widened, as they took in the view.

Umbrellas, ukele's and unicorns too.
All could be found in this haven of "U".

You are welcome to stay but you won't see much here
When the B_rds flew away, so went the cheer.

The F_ish are long gone, no T_me for l_me P_e.
There's plenty of sorrow but not with one ... I.

She peered at his face; kind, handsome and true
I am not the "I", "U" is that you?

U looked at me then, like I will never forget
And I took your hand on the day that we met.

So, that's the story, according to me
Of how I found U. The THEY became WE.
